Newman host to recycling plant

By JOSEPH M. TUCKER
Staff editor

NEWMAN – Approximately 200 people attended the groundbreaking ceremony Saturday for a $15 million hazardous waste recycling plant.

Operated by Recontek, the plant is the first of its kind in the nation according to Jerry Pett, Illinois field representative for Recontek. The plant site in Newman is located 30 miles northeast of Charleston.

Recontek will take cadmium, chromium, lead, silver and cyanide from manufacturers and process the compounds into usable products, Pett said. The plant will process hazardous waste from Indianapolis, St. Louis and Chicago as well as other cities.

Because of stricter governmental standards dictating the procedures for proper disposal of hazardous waste materials, many companies have found it is more profitable to recycle their waste.

John Schmitt, who received his master's degree at Eastern in 1978, was at the ceremony representing Gov. James Thompson. Schmitt commended Recontek executives for "working to expedite" the environment's cleanup.

Newman Economic Development Council President James Allen said Recontek will "make us good stewards of the Earth."

U.S. Representative Terry Bruce, R-Olney, echoed these sentiments by noting Recontek's use of high technology to care for the environment. He illustrated this point by referring to President George Bush's recent clean-air proposal and the 20th anniversary of the first manned moon landing.

Budget increase request at $51.8 million

By STEPHANIE CAMPBELL
Campus editor

Eastern is requesting an increase of $51.8 million for the fiscal year 1990-91 budget to be used for capital projects and expanding courses on campus.

Eastern's request includes $10.1 million for repairs and renovations to Buzzard Building, $21.7 million for repairs and renovation to Booth Library, $5.1 million for expanding and improving programs, $3.4 million for improvement to McAfee, and $364,000 for new roofing on Old Main.

The other universities that asked for budget increases to the Board of Governors include Western Illinois University, Northeastern Illinois University, Governors State University and Chicago State University.

Eastern's request is a 27.3 percent increase or $14 million more than last year's increase, and is the biggest request of the four schools.

If the request is approved, Eastern's faculty and staff will receive a 12 percent across-the-board pay increase.

"It is still negotiable," said Michelle Brazell, a spokesperson for the Board of Governors. "Eastern's requests are not unreasonable."

Brazell said there are many steps that the proposal must go through before reaching the governor. First it originates at the university and then it goes to the BOG.

The proposal would next pass the Illinois Board of Higher Education, the legislature and the governor.

This year, the BOG requested $10.8 million for Eastern's capital projects. The IBHE cut the request to $4.9 million and the General Assembly cut it to $1.7 million.

Eastern's operating budget requested more than $4.7 million to pay salaries for faculty and staff. Included in that amount was money to: restore purchasing power lost in other years, cover inflation levels, provide promotional and merit adjustments and relieve perceived market inequities.

In other business, the BOG approved the Distinguishing Professor Award to be awarded to a faculty member from each of the BOG schools. The award is to recognize excellence in teaching, research and public service activities.

The professor presented with this award will receive a $5,000 stipend and 50 percent reassigned time for presentations.

Charleston man dies in crash

Charleston police are investigating a fatal two-vehicle accident that occurred early Saturday evening on north Illinois 130 at Reasor Drive.

While police reports were not available Monday, the (Charleston) Times-Courier reported that a passenger in one of the vehicles, John F. Fisher of Charleston, died Sunday at Carle Foundation Hospital in Urbana.

Fisher, 18, was transferred from Sarah Bush Lincoln Health Center to Carle.

Eight other people were injured in the accident that occurred at about 6:32 p.m.

Charleston resident John Piacentine, 29, who was driving the pickup truck involved in the accident, was released after treatment at SBLHC.

The remaining seven were listed in fair condition at the hospital.

Injured were Melissa Walker, 20, of Urbana; Jason Walker, 2, of Urbana; Marnetta Walker, 3, of Urbana; Tina Cornell, 29, of Charleston; Seth Cornell, 4, of Charleston; and Joshua Fillman, 11, of Charleston.

Panel to study gambling

SPRINGFIELD — The General Assembly's Democratic leaders announced formation Monday of a task force to study riverboat gambling, signaling their support for efforts to revive the issue.

House Speaker Michael Madigan of Chicago and Senate President Philip Rock of Oak Park noted that riverboat gambling legislation was approved by the Senate only to be defeated last month in the House and that Gov. James R. Thompson has voiced continued support for the idea.

"I believe that this bipartisan show of support from legislators and the governor indicates that we need to continue our efforts for riverboat gambling in Illinois," Rock said in a statement announcing formation for the panel.

In Monday's announcement, Madigan noted that Iowa has enacted legislation to launch riverboat gambling beginning in 1991.

Dotson closer to new rape trial

CHICAGO (AP) — A circuit judge on Monday rejected prosecutors' efforts to block a new trial for convicted rapist Gary Dotson, four years after Cathleen Crowell Webb recanted the testimony that sent him to jail.

Cook County Circuit Judge Thomas R. Fitzgerald, ruling that genetic test results obtained by Dotson's attorneys constitute important new evidence, denied two motions by prosecutors to dismiss a petition for a new trial.

Further hearings are planned, but defense attorney Thomas Breen, who filed the petition, said the judge's ruling paves the way for a new trial that will finally vindicate Dotson.

"It's great," Breen said after the hearing. "We're 90 percent there."

But Assistant State's Attorney Gayle Shines called talk of a new trial pure speculation.

She said the state will outline its position on the new evidence at a hearing set for Aug. 14. At that point, Fitzgerald will set a date for a hearing that likely will determine whether a new trial will take place.

Ms. Shines said prosecutors have not decided what approach to take regarding the new evidence that Dotson's attorneys say proves he did not rape Ms. Webb.

Simon looks at AIDS/schools issue

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Children with AIDS and the offspring of drug users will pose major problems in coming years for public schools under a federal mandate to serve the disabled, educators told a hearing held Monday by U.S. Sen. Paul Simon.

Simon, D-Ill., is reviewing a 14-year-old federal law requiring a free public education for handicapped children. He was told that accurate figures on the extent of the problem are hard to come by, but that schools are now seeing only "the tip of the iceberg."

"The number is going to increase dramatically in Illinois and in the nation," said Ed Sontag, assistant state superintendent for special education. "We need to be ready to deal with this problem."

Sontag said many early cases of AIDS in children resulted from blood transfusions, but that the problem now centers on children who were infected before birth by a parent who carried the AIDS virus.

IDNS digs in Martinsville

By DAVID LINDQUIST
Managing editor

While the Illinois Department of Nuclear Safety continues its water and geological survey near Martinsville's proposed low-level radioactive waste facility, Concerned Citizens of Clark County are hoping the IDNS literally is on shaky ground.

Jim Stratton, an Eastern geography and geology professor on sabbatical to work with the IDNS, said 30 to 50 holes are scheduled to be drilled in the next 10 weeks.

"We're trying to get a firm understanding for groundwater flow of the site," Stratton said of the holes which are up to 50-feet deep. "Everything we have is preliminary, but we're going to have a lot of data."

Steve Cloud of Concerned Citizens said his group is hoping the data shows the proposed Martinsville site is unacceptable.

"We'd really like to get an independent geologist who's not funded by state money to go over the data," Cloud said, adding that faculty members at public universities are paid by such funds.

The land being studied is known as Vandalia till, which features clay silt soil according to Stratton.

"There's basically no flow of water in clay," Stratton said.

Cloud expressed concerns about fractures in the soil that would allow contaminated water to reach the water table and then pollute local wells.

"Fractures that transmit water are not good," Stratton said. "The main thing is avoid the fast flow of water away from the site. We want to make sure it's slow enough to monitor and fix."

Cloud said if sand facies were evident rather than clay, contaminated water could flow directly into the north fork of the Embarras River.

"Water goes through clean sand fairly quickly," Stratton said. "We've picked up some sand, but it's dry (enclosed in clay and not connected with other sand deposits)."

Stratton said the current drilling program is about a month old and a continuation of studies begun last year.

Aside from direct opposition to the waste facility from Concerned Citizens, the IDNS recently fielded complaints about drilling near Rupp Cemetery, a private cemetery located in the site's buffer zone between U.S. 40 and Interstate 70 north of Martinsville.

Mrs. Jerald Medsker of Martinsville wrote a letter that appeared in Monday's (Charleston) Times-Courier stating that many of Martinsville's early settlers are buried at the Rupp cemetery and that drilling is a "desecration of the dead."

Stratton said he understood Medsker's concerns.

"Our drill rig is near the cemetery," Stratton said. "If you look from the road, you see the rig and tombstones. But we're not on cemetery property."

Recontek is "unique to United States and has only one partner in Europe," Bruce said.

Recontek President John Schweikart discussed the origins of recycling with aluminum cans and newspapers, but said "it's gotten down to the manufacturing process itself."

Allen, who presided over the ceremony, said Recontek is "environmentally safe and is going to do something to clean up our environment."

Recontek received its operating permit June 30 from federal and state environmental protection agencies. The permit was issued after a series of long legal reviews that were initiated in May 1988.

The Illinois Environmental Protection Agency's permit stated that Recontek has one year from the date of the first shipment of hazardous waste to demonstrate that the company is producing economically valuable products.

The state environmental protection agency has set up defensive standards restricting the storage of processed and unprocessed materials. Recontek was instructed to take out environmental impairment liability insurance covering $10 million per occurrence.

The plant must also have a $20 million policy in case of an accident in which chemicals escape the facilities.

State Rep. Tim Johnson, R-Urbana, commended the citizens of Newman for their "tremendous degree of cooperation that has developed and will continue to develop in the community."

"Recontek has already made themselves part of this community."

The people of Newman, interested in the 180 jobs and the $3.6 million payroll Recontek will bring, have supported the hazardous waste recycling plant. The plant is expected to be in operation in the spring of 1990.

"These jobs are real jobs, because we have the business to move on them right away," Schweikart said.

Liquor commission hears testimony on case

By CARL WALK
City editor

A liquor commission hearing took place Friday to deal with charges against Panther Lounge for allowing a minor on its premises and for serving alcohol to that person.

"Testimony occurred and was taken about the incident," City Attorney John Dively said. Charleston Mayor and Liquor Commissioner Wayne Lanman will render his decision on the charges before July 26, he added.

As liquor commissioner, the mayor is responsible for sanctions against bars that do not comply to Illinois statutes allowing only patrons aged 21 and over to purchase alcohol, as well as city codes setting the mandatory bar entrance age of 19.

John White, 19, testified that he was permitted to enter the lounge on Jan. 30 and drink pitchers of beer that he purchased there.

White, who was an 18-year-old Eastern freshman at the time, entered the Panther Lounge about 3:30 p.m. with Bartt Sturgeon, 20, of Charleston and Bradley Jackson, according to the Charleston Times-Courier.

Charges were filed against the lounge for serving alcohol to White, but were not filed for serving Sturgeon.

The police investigation concluded that both Sturgeon and White had been drinking in Panther Lounge, 1421 Fourth St., and Thirsty's Tavern, 221 Sixth St., before being seriously injured in a car accident Jan. 30.

The accident involved a 1979 Pontiac driven by Sturgeon with White as a passenger. The car was heading south on Sixth Street when the right front of the car struck a tree on the east side of the street.

Both were taken to Sarah Bush Lincoln Health Center and treated for injuries. White suffered severe head injuries, and went through 7 1/2 hours of facial reconstruction surgery. He was then placed in a surgical intensive care unit at Carle Hospital in Champaign.

Sturgeon suffered a fractured femur and was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and failure to wear a seatbelt. He is now serving two years probation.

After the incident, former Mayor Murray Choate announced the need for a liquor commission hearing concerning the incident. A hearing for Thirsty's Tavern will take place on July 28.

The Charleston City Code Book states that a bar found in violation of city codes can face a maximum fine of $500, a license suspension of up to 30 days or a complete revocation of the license.

Air safety demands our attention

People view airplane crashes as perhaps the most devastating accidents. Such crashes, like that of United Flight 232 last week, garner widespread media attention because of the sheer power of the event.

But beyond the sometimes shallow media coverage of such events there lies a real problem.

Editorial

The nation's commercial air fleet is ungracefully reaching middle age, and the skies are becoming more and more crowded as air travel becomes as much of a U.S. staple as bread and butter.

Instead of wrapping themselves in the flag and pursuing other inconsequential issues, politicians should turn their attention more wholeheartedly to issues like the problems in the nation's skies.

Like drunk-driving accidents, air disaster is something that its victims have little or no control over. The duty to control the skies must fall to government agencies like the National Transportation Safety Board and the Federal Aviation Administration.

We believe the alarming number of disasters and near-disasters warrant an increase in government involvement in the aviation industry. When passengers step on a plane, they should be sure such mechanical failure as that of United Flight 232 won't happen. We don't believe passengers have such security now.

Moreover, increasing air disaster danger could easily cause catastrophic damage on the ground.

Take Flight 232 for example. Experts agree Capt. A.C. Haynes was to be praised for getting the DC-10 to the runway in Sioux City, Iowa. If the plane had instead crashed into a populated area, the devastation would have been incomprehensible.

Therefore, in the interests of the flying public, as well as everyone living under a flight pattern, everything that can be done must be done to prevent disasters like the one Wednesday in Iowa.

Some say it was the three most perfect days of humanity. Others may call it an evil quagmire in which a generation was forever lost.

Those with perspective recognize Woodstock as a musical benchmark that deserves reflection on its 20th anniversary.

Because I entered the world a month after the peace and music festival concluded in rural New York, it's obvious that my scope is limited when speaking of Jefferson Airplane, the Who or Grateful Dead.

On the other hand, those Woodstock bands have churned out tunes in three decades and I can safely say I have a grasp of where Paul Kantner, Pete Townshend and Bob Weir are coming from.

Ironically, Jefferson Airplane and the Dead did not have notable performances at Woodstock. Instead, the high points onstage were offered by starcrossed bands such as Canned Heat and Ten Years After — now banished to album chapters in the famous La Musica Rock discount bin series.

Actually, it's only right that the one-of-a-kind festival would be boosted by "smaller" bands playing the show of their lives.

For the socially conscious, there was Country Joe of

David Lindquist

Country Joe and the Fish to lead 300,000 hippies in an expletive chant before launching into "The Feel-like-I'm-fixing-to-die Rag," an upbeat protest number.

For those looking for over-the-top guitar crunching, Alvin Lee's Ten Years After provided pyrotechnical fireworks eight years before Eddie Van Halen burst onto the scene with "Runnin' with the Devil."

And for the complete essence of Woodstock, one should look no further than Canned Heat, purveyors of the "Refried Boogie" and the Woodstock classic that extolled the virtues of rural life, "Goin' up the Country."

In retrospect, Woodstock was not Utopia. It rained and Sha Na Na performed (That's correct, John "Bowser" Bowman shared a bill with Richie Havens).

But neither was it Sodom. All those in attendance took part in a communal living experiment of the grandest scale and overcame the rain and even hunger to an extent.

It would be most insightful, though, to learn more from someone who was part of the Woodstock community Sept. 2-5, 1969. If any reader fits that description, many would be appreciative if you would tune in, turn on and contact The Daily Eastern News.

As it is, those of us who missed the experience feel as badly as those thousands who left Woodstock before Jimi Hendrix played Sunday morning.

—David Lindquist is managing editor of the summer edition of The Daily Eastern News.

President Bush doesn't have time to talk to you about Airline Safety He is busy with more important matters.

Your turn

Abortion should be last resort

Editor,

Since reading several opinions on the abortion issue, I feel a need to offer my own.

Abortion, like any other technology of our age, can be used however man chooses to use it. Take nuclear technology, for example. The atom, used in weapons, can destroy civilization know it, on the other hand, if the atom is used responsibly, it could solve many problems of the energy shortage in this world.

If a woman's life is in danger by carrying or bearing a child abortion can be used to save her life. Don't get me wrong! Only in rare cases a woman's life put in danger by being pregnant, and abortion should be used only as a last resort! If a woman could save her life by having an abortion, then modern technology would allow her to save it. On the other hand, it would be silly for an otherwise healthy woman to destroy the young life within her, just because she did not intend to become pregnant.

Some cowards use, "the child isn't wanted and wouldn't be loved," as an excuse for having an abortion. What about those "unloved" members of society? What about the aged, with few family or friends, or the homeless people on the streets, or minority immigrants? Does Roe vs. Wade allow us to erase them too!

In 1969, when my mother carried me in her womb, she contracted the German measles. Illinois law would have allowed abortion, since I could have been born with one or more birth defects. My parents discussed the possibility of abortion with their doctor. They chose against it—they would love a "defective" child as much as a "normal" one. Luckily, I had no birth defects. But if I had, I would have preferred to be alive than to have been aborted.

There was once a couple engaged to be married. The woman became pregnant, but the child was not that of her fiancé. The man could have broken the engagement, but he did not. He could have demanded that his fiancee have an abortion, since the child was not his own. But this was not possible, since abortion technology did not exist at this time. This man stayed with his fiancée, and the child was born in a stable, full of animals. Was this child wanted or loved by the world into which he was born? Not exactly. While in the prime of his life, some jealous and selfish men framed him, and the government executed him with two common criminals. If you wish to know more of this story then read the Gospel of Mark, which gives the briefest account.

Can you deny any child the right to life? Can you deny a child (or a fetus) the chance to know the love of Christ, who was born, lived, and died, and lived again so that all of us may have life! If you answer yes, then you are denying to yourself the love of Christ as well. Choose the love of Christ! Choose life!

Welcome to Eastern

Dear Summer Visitors,

As president of Eastern Illinois University, I welcome you to the campus for the 1989 Summer Camps and Conferences.

Eastern hosts a wide range of special interest groups in the Summer, beginning with the IHSA State Track Meets for both boys and girls at the end of May, and continuing throughout the Summer. Among the groups on campus, for example, are the American Legion Premier Boys State, Illini Girls State, the Percy Julian Program, Civil Air Patrol, and Elderhostel. Camps are regularly held in music, art, mathematics, individual and group sports, cheerleading, minority leadership, student orientation, and for several religious groups.

Taylor doing OK in LA

Jay Taylor is working out with New Jersey Nets veterans and draft picks in Los Angeles.

By DAVID LINDQUIST
Managing editor

Jay Taylor says two-a-day practices at the New Jersey Nets try-out camp have been tough, but southern California is as good a place as any to have them.

"Things are going smoothly, I'm just out here relaxing," Taylor said from his Los Angeles hotel between practices Monday.

Taylor is one of 26 veterans, draft picks and free agents who has practiced in New Jersey's camp since Friday, and seven players were on the Nets roster at the conclusion of last season.

"It's going well," Taylor said. "They're (the veterans) playing with us, so I'm getting good experience."

New Jersey's Chris Morris and Roy Hinson are among the veterans in camp, as is first-round Nets selection Mookie Blaylock of Oklahoma.

On Tuesday, a team will be culled from the 26 to compete for nine games in the Southern California Summer Pro League held at Loyola Marymount University.

Taylor said he's confident that he will be selected by coach Willis Reed to stay with the Nets for the summer games.

"Nineteen NBA teams are playing, so it should be a pretty nice league," Taylor said.

If Taylor doesn't compete as a Net in the league, teams are also formed by unattached players.

"I've been shooting well so far, so I think I'll be all right," Taylor said.

Texas CBA team tabs Taylor

By DAVID LINDQUIST
Managing editor

Texas may play a big role in the basketball future of former Eastern star Jay Taylor.

Taylor, currently attending a New Jersey Nets tryout camp in Los Angeles, was selected by the Wichita Falls Texans in the first round of the Continental Basketball Association college draft held last Thursday in Columbus, Ohio.

Making Taylor the 13th player chosen overall, Texans President Steve Baxter said the versatility of Eastern's all-time leading scorer appealed to the Texans.

"He was attractive as a player because he's probably a little bit bigger guard that can play point or off-guard," Baxter said. "We've had nothing but good reviews on his play."

Taylor said being drafted could be considered a drawback if he fails to make the NBA and then could not choose a CBA organization since Wichita Falls owns his rights in that league.

"But it also is security," Taylor said. "You know you'll go somewhere."

Wichita Falls picked 6-9 forward Randy Henry of Middle Tennessee State four selections prior to taking Taylor.

"Our top priorities going into the draft were Randy and Jay," Baxter said. "Fortunately we were able to get them both."

Baxter said the Mississippi Jets of the CBA were moved to Wichita Falls last year and made it to the finals of the Eastern Division playoffs in the Texans' inaugural season before losing to eventual league champion Tulsa.

The Texans were led last season by former Chicago Bull guard Ennis Whatley last year, but Baxter said Whatley will likely advance to the NBA this year.

"We'll need some help at guard, and hopefully Jay's one who can provide that," Baxter said.

Baxter said his club is in the process of contract discussions with Taylor, adding that most CBA contracts are one-year deals.

"We start practice the last week of October, and we'll keep close contact with our draftees until then," Baxter said.

Four other Association of Mid-Continent Universities players were taken in the CBA's first round. Southwest Missouri State forward Hubert Henderson was picked fifth by Topeka.
